Project x Police Union Contracts

What does our tool do?

Our tool allows researchers to explore police union contracts more easily for information, and helps citizens to find resources near them and learn more about the process of filing a misconduct complaint.

How can it help?

With a more widespread understanding of these police union contracts, we can help break down the barriers they pose to holding police officers accountable for misconduct and misconduct investigation processes. This can help those considering filing a police misconduct complaint understand more about how the process works and what it means for them if they choose to do so.

About PxPUC

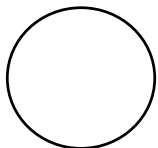

The PxPUC team is made up of a subset of members from Grief to Action (G2A) , a working group at the University of Pittsburgh's Center for Analytical Approaches.

Our team is made up of students, staff, and community members who came together this summer in the wake of George Floyd's murder to use data analysis to address structural racism in Pittsburgh and beyond.

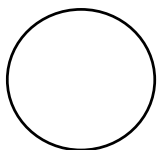

The aim of this project is to analyze police union contracts and the barriers they pose to holding police officers accountable, as well as to demystify the police misconduct investigation process.

Our search tool allows users to easily look up information in these contracts, and helps them to become more familiar with some of the problematic language used within them and break this information down.
